YOUNG COASTER SERIOUSLY HURT

East Palestine Youth In Hospital; Skull Fracture Feared

Columbiana county's first coasting accident of the season was recorded at East Palestine early last night when Kenneth P. Smith, 8-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Smith of 483 E. Clark st., East Palestine, was run over by an automobile.

Brought to Salem City hospital at 7 p. m., the boy was found to have suffered a fractured skull. His condition is described as fair.

According to East Palestine police, the lad was sled-riding on a hill and coasted into the path of an automobile on E. Martin st., driven by Donald G. Clark, 20, of R. D. 2, East Palestine. The driver was not held by police.

Health Board Order Brings Court Action

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Alexander of Newgarden st., have filed an action in common pleas court in Lisbon asking a restraining injunction against Dr. Seward Harris, county health commissioner, and Dr. Harry Bookwalter, Sr., John Eiferd, Willis Boone, H. O. Stanley, and William B. Moore, Jr., as members of the Columbiana county board of health.

The injunction is asked against the board's order to abate a nuisance, a pig sty in Salem township, which was issued as the result of a petition by township trustees, and effective Dec. 1.

The petition sets forth that the plaintiff are the owners of 4.42 acres in Salem township, a part of which is properly fenced for the raising of hogs, from which Alexander says, he gains a part of his livelihood, feeding the swine on garbage collected on contracts from Salem homes. Alexander states the lot is not within 100 feet of any highway, and that the nearest home is that of a tenant on his place, who lives on the opposite side of the highway from the hog lot. The next nearest homes, the petition states, are not within 1,000 feet, and that if the order of the board of health is carried out Alexander will be financially injured.

Trucking Company Is Named In Action

The CCC Highway Inc., of Cleveland, was named defendant in two damage actions filed in court in Lisbon late Friday. A total of $5,000 was asked in each for personal injuries sustained in an accident in Salem last Feb. 28, in which a truck of the defendant company was involved.

The actions were filed by Joseph and Nick Limpose, both of Leontia, whose petitions state they were riding on W. State st. and that, as they made a right turn onto Howard st. a truck-and-trail outfit of the defendant company was alleged to have been wrongfully parked, and that in attempting to avoid a collision with the vehicle, the Limposes car skidded and collided with a pole.

GREEN RENAMED BY FARM GROUP

Policy Of Restricted Production Is Hit By Federation

(By Associated Press) COLUMBUS, Nov. 30.—The Ohio Farm Bureau federation today recorded its belief that "any general policy of restricted production will bring us greater problems and possible disaster."

The federation's 4,500 delegates to its annual convention adopted a resolution indicating a willingness to have the Agricultural Adjustment Act repealed as soon as "inequalities" among business labor and agriculture are adjusted.

Green Re-elected

At its concluding session, the federation re-elected Perry L. Green as president, A. F. Moon of Conover as vice president, Murray D. Lincoln of Columbus as secretary, and W. E. Sollars of Washington Court House as treasurer.

In their resolution, the farmers recommended a simplification of the AAA to increase farmer control of its operations and make it more flexible to fit local conditions.

The resolution said present inequalities resulted from tariffs, corporate controls, and labor monopolies or restrictions.

The federation sidetracked the state tax issue by urging that the states seek more financial help from the federal government.

A resolution declared that "because of the enormous expenditures of the federal government, it has entered the income tax field to such an extent that it makes it difficult and perhaps impracticable at this time for Ohio to successfully enact an income tax."

Fear Double Taxation

"To do this would put it in competition with other states, cause double taxation in many cases and discrimination between individuals."

Other resolutions adopted asked: A bi-partisan state highway commission;

Fencing along state and federal highways be provided from highway funds;

"More stringent" enforcement of the laws protecting land owners from the hazards of the hunter "who does not conduct himself in a sportsmanlike manner"; and broader police powers for the state highway patrol.

Cope Completes First Third Of His U.S. Army Air Course; Flying Cadet Now Has 60 Hours Of Flying To His Credit

"The army's life, and as for flying, it's swell!"

That is the opinion of William S. "Bill" Cope, Salem youth who is now a flying cadet in the U. S. Army Air Corps Reserve at Maxwell field, near Montgomery, Ala.

Cope, after 10 weeks of flying at Van de Graff field at Tuscaloosa, Ala., was transferred this week to Maxwell field to continue his studies and flight training.

The Salem pilot, who has survived the "wash-out" period, is one-third of the way toward his goal as a second lieutenant in the Army Air Corps Reserve.

The cadet group of which he is a member has dwindled from 57 to 28. Cope explained, however, that his class had an unusually large number of "wash-outs" since records show that from 60 to 70 per cent of the cadets manage to successfully complete the training and win their commissions.

Daily ground work consists of three hours' study on varied subjects, such as algebra, trigonometry, plane structure, typography, map reading, weather study and engine mechanics. These form the basic needs for future navigators.

The cadets have from one to three hours' flying each day. In the 10 weeks Cope spent in Alabama, there were only two days of bad weather to stop flying.

Cope's only flying before he en-

RUMANIA NEAR CIVIL WAR AS PURGE GOES ON

Young King Mihai Is Reported To Have Fled Bucharest

FUNERAL IS HELD BY IRON GUARDS

On Other Side Of World, Japan Reports "Peace" With Nanking

(By Associated Press) The disinterred bones of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, founder of the Rumanian Iron Guard who was slain two years ago, were carried in a gold coffin through the streets of Bucharest today in a funeral procession ominous in its solemnity and the absence of King Mihai.

For the young king was reported to have fled from the city as reports spread that the Iron Guards would use this day for further bloody revenge against the men who killed Codreanu in the regime of the king's father, the abdicated Carol II.

Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini were importantly represented in the funeral procession which was led by Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu and Vice Premier Horia Sima.

Sign "Peace" Treaty

On the other side of the world, in Nanking, Japan and the Nanking government, which is endorsed, signed a peace treaty to end the 40 months of war in China.

Japanese machine-guns and warplanes guarded the ceremony but peace still was remote since the pact, recognizing President Wang Ching-wei's regime as the national government of China, did not affect the activities of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, who was still carrying on against the invaders.

Strict censorship veiled the reported disorders in Rumania, where heavy casualties were said to have taken place. Rumanian and German troops were reported massing in Bucharest.

Carried through the streets with Codreanu's bones were those of 13 of his comrades, killed two years ago today when, guards charged, they tried to escape during a transfer from one prison to another.

Their bodies were exhumed Wednesday when the Iron Guards killed 64 members of the old regime and started the reign of terror which front dispatches hinted had brought Rumania to the verge of civil war.

In the battle of Britain, German fighter-bombers roared toward London today, but visibility was poor and only a few raiders broke through the British defenses.

The Nanking peace pact was to open a new era of military and economic cooperation.

RULE OUT HIKE IN INCOME TAX

No Further Increases For 1940 Pledged At Conference

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The nation's millions of income taxpayers, both big corporations and plain citizens, were assured by President Roosevelt and congressional finance experts today that they need expect no further increase in their tax bills for 1940.

While sharp increases, designed to help meet defense-awarded expenditures, appeared to be almost certain for the taxes on 1941 incomes, Chairman Harrison (D-Miss) of the senate finance committee announced that further retroactive taxes on this year's income were out of the picture.

This was decided, Harrison said, at a supper conference which the President held last night with treasury officials and leaders of interested congressional committees.

Schedule to Stand

It means that the basic 24 per cent corporation income tax rate and the graduated levy on individual incomes starting at 4.4 per cent, will stand. First installments on 1940 income taxes will fall due next March 15.

Harrison said that, early in January, congressional committees will begin work on legislation affecting 1942 incomes. It is generally believed that many tax rates will go up when that measure is enacted.

The size of the increases probably will not be determined finally until after the March 15 returns are in. Chairman Doughton (D-NC) of the house ways and means committee and another of the presidential conferees, said present estimates.

WORKERS BRAVE GAS AND ROCKS IN PITS AT CADIZ

Others Of 130 At Work Escape Following Explosion

FIVE RESCUERS OVERCOME BY GAS

No Evidence Of Flames Found By Investigators

(By Associated Press) CADIZ, Nov. 30.—Tolling rescue crews braved treacherous rock falls and deadly gas today in a grim race to reach at least 28 miners entombed by a blast two miles from the entrance to one of Ohio's largest coal pits.

M. Speicher, mine personnel director, listed 28 missing, including his brother, Pete, and said "four more names may be added" to the total.

"It's anybody's guess when we can get to them," said F. R. Sinclair, superintendent of the Ohio and Pennsylvania company's Nelms mine northeast of here in a remote and hilly bituminous field.

Hold Little Hope

As the hours passed, officials indicated they held little hope of finding the men alive in the bitter cold 466 feet underground. "It looks very dark," admitted Nelson Hovey, assistant state industrial relations director.

Others of the 130 at work at the time of the explosion in section "north 12" escaped, officials said. The shaft mine employs about 500.

Repeated state falls and excessive gas slowed rescue operations. Five workers, wearing oxygen masks, were carried from the mine unconscious shortly after midnight, but were revived and able to walk to their homes.

Mine inspectors then ordered erection of additional brattices—temporary partitions—as protection against the fumes. Original canvas brattices were replaced with wooden planks because of abnormal pressure.

About 5 a. m. rescue crews reached a telephone shanty location where they expected to find four men, but failed to locate anyone. Workers said the bodies might be covered by rock falls.

As rescue operations became increasingly slow, a mechanical loading device was started to clear out the debris.

Slate Falls Slow Workers

Following a talk with Marcus Kerr, director of the state bureau of mines who is supervising rescue operations, Hovey said the slate falls also were presenting a grave menace to workers. The leader of one rescue crew reported 15 men barely escaped being crushed under one fall.

Adolph Pacifico, district United Mine Workers' vice president, said the trapped men's "one chance" was in reaching a finished mine room.

The superintendent emphasized there was no evidence of fire following the terrific detonation, tentatively attributed by miners to ignited gas. He asserted the workings had been thoroughly rock dusted to prevent explosions and that only "permissible" explosives and machinery were used.

E. H. Snider, assistant manager of the firm's Cleveland headquarters, said the Cadiz area was "dotted with oil and gas" but asserted he was unable to advance a cause for the blast.

The mine disaster was Ohio's second this year. Seventy-two men were killed in the March 16 explosion at the nearby Willow Grove mine.

DEMOCRACY CAN BE DYNAMIC

Regeneration of democratic principles in a world cringing under brute force can occur on one condition. A more dynamic force than that embodied in the dictatorial states must be developed.

Germany, Italy, Russia, Japan and their satellites dared to attack because they believed they were stronger than their victims. Wherever they have succeeded they have proved they were right.

Until the collapse of France, Great Britain did not even realize the gravity of its position. Beginning then—almost too late—the British tried to make up the ground they had lost.

Americans were jarred out of their complacency by what happened in the spring. But during the summer and fall they found it comfortable to slip back into complacency again. After all, Britain still stood.

More recent evidence that things are worse with the British than wishful thinkers hoped they would be at this stage of the war is shaking American complacency again. "It is later than you think" has been the warning cry of a few. Now it is becoming the conviction of a great many.

This is the test of America's ability to generate the dynamic force that can save it and Great Britain in the bargain. British will and power to resist the totalitarian onslaught must be matched, then doubled and redoubled.

America's proper destiny, its only conceivable destiny, is to become strong enough to protect its principles wherever and however they may be attacked. It must do the best it can, knowing that its best will be good enough.

Nothing would be more dangerous now than a repetition of the dead center stagnation that paralyzed Britain and France between the conquest of Poland and the invasion of the low countries. That was a psychological as well as a physical error; it was easier to think and to act as though everything possible were being done than to face the hard truth that seemingly impossible things were going to have to be done, too. The dynamism of the totalitarian bloc leaves no margin of safety for its victims.

Perhaps Britain's dark days and the fact they are frightening Americans as well as Britons will prove a blessing in disguise. Perhaps they will put up a bar to complacent thought and action in the nation whose productive capacity is the sole means of salvaging democracy from tyranny. Perhaps they will keep the United States from struggling helplessly against its own potential power on dead center. Perhaps they will strike the spark that will release the tremendous energy of the American way of life. It is later than we think—but not too late.

ONLY THE BEGINNING

With more enterprise than accuracy, Associated Press has estimated that six major nations, including this one, now are spending 50 billion dollars a year on arms. There is no way to make even a guess about how much the use of the arms is costing—the destruction, bloodshed and disturbance of war, itself.

Nor is there any way to arrive at an approximate total cost of modern militarism, which now affects every country on the face of the earth. No nation, however small, is immune to the latest ghastly ride of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse. The World war—the war to end wars—was so costly that statisticians finally compromised on an estimate of the waste it caused by saying that the same amount of money spent constructively would have paid for almost all of mankind's peaceful aspirations.

Men with vision claimed to see after the World war that the crushing cost of mass belligerency made it an impractical instrument of national policy—that the game no longer was worth the candle. Nothing has happened to contradict their judgment, not even the tortured reasoning of warmakers who try to convince their victims that only by wasting life and property do nations become strong. The victims know better; they knew better in 1918 and they know better in 1940.

DON'T THROW OUT THE BABY

Aviation companies whose orders for new planes are being eyed as possible interference with military demands are protesting stoutly that they are nothing of the kind. It's easy to agree with them.

It looks as though they might be victims of one of the fabled follies of the flutter-brains—throwing out the baby with the bath. The few planes that might be gained for national defense by stopping commercial aviation orders would be scant reward for injury to one of the nation's lushest infants—the commercial flying business.

An eastern airline proudly advertised the other day that it was adding a number of new planes to its Washington-New York service to accommodate increased passenger traffic between the capital and the metropolis. A large part of the increase, it was explained, could be traced to the travel demands of persons working on national defense problems.

From the outset, the airplane has been the victim of militarism; its development for years was almost solely in the hands of fighting men. Converted to the uses of civilians, the airplane has made a place for itself. Interference with its civil function for any reason short of a major emergency would be a mistake.

They ought to place the architect who built the House of Representative in the Hall of Immortals. He built a roof that lasted 85 years under all that oratory before beginning to show the strain.

There is a growing feeling that Europe isn't worth saving, at least not if it costs anything.

Maybe we do too much bragging about having nothing happen to us in this country. Smugness is not a guarantee of peace and contentment.

Medicine Wars On Wart

An Encouraging Sign, Declares Clendening

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

One day last year a dignified group of about fifty physicians met in the city of Philadelphia. They represented the most scientific thought in the field of dermatology today. They met to discuss warts. For several hours they talked about nothing else and they pooled the experience of the scientific world on the subject.

This seems to me an encouraging sign. The medical profession has so long regarded warts as beneath their notice, even beneath their contempt. And yet there the miserable things are, troubling thousands of people. To have them the object of a learned symposium is indeed a recognition of the rights of humanity.

Warts are either the easiest or the hardest condition in the field of dermatology to treat. They often disappear of themselves. But they may hang on and plague a person for years.

The Common Wart

The common wart is known as verruca vulgaris, the vulgar wart. Then there is verruca juvenilis—the wart of the young; and verruca plantaris—the wart of the bottom of the foot.

It is generally believed now that they are all due to a form of infection—a virus, but it has certain peculiarities. It is almost impossible to say where one acquired the infection because the latest period between contact and the appearance of the wart may be twelve to twenty months. Multiple warts tend to spread in a linear manner along the lines of scratch.

Either common or juvenile warts respond to local applications in many instances—any antiseptic such as ammoniated mercury, salicylic acid, sulphur or resorcin will work. My own family remedy is formaldehyde. Get a half-ounce bottle and tip it up so as to wet the cork and touch the wart lightly with the moistened cork four or five times a day.

The X-ray and electro-desiccation—a sort of electric cautery—are to be used when the simple means fail.

Bloch's Observations

A remarkable set of observations is that of Bloch who cured warts by suggestion. The eyes of the patient are blindfolded and he sits with his hands on an electrically controlled vibrating machine. No electric currents of any kind enter the body, however. The warts are painted with methylene blue or red ink, and the patient is told that so long as any trace of color remains he is not to touch the warts. This latter caution prevents re-infection. The disappearance of warts under these circumstances explains the old housewife methods of rubbing the wart with a piece of raw meat and burying the meat under an apple tree on a moonlight night, or burying the dish rag under the porch.

At any rate, the patient should always be warned at the beginning of treatment that it may take time, so he will not give up in despair if the first methods fail.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

LONDON—After searching London for a cousin he had never seen, Lieut. Brodt, a Polish officer, met her in the blackout. While walking Piccadilly one evening he ran into a girl and knocked her down. After helping her to her feet and apologizing, he introduced himself. So did the girl, who was his missing cousin.

Services In Our Churches

Rev. Thomas to Speak At Trinity Service On Advent Sunday

Rev. M. Edwin Thomas, D. D., administrative secretary of the board of foreign missions of the United Lutheran Church of America, will speak at the morning service of the Holy Trinity English Lutheran church Sunday. This is also the first Sunday in Advent.

Church announcements follow: Sunday school, 9:45. Charles W. Youtz, Supt. No one should be deceived about the matter of being disciples of Jesus Christ. It is not choosing the easy way. Our Savior welcomed many people into the service of His Kingdom, but he never intended that it would be a path of roses for the followers of the Cross. In fact, it is a very exacting discipleship that was offered by Christ. Jesus made it plain that there should be no turning back once the decision is reached about following Him. Back-sliders and half-hearted followers were not given much consideration by our Master. To be fit for the Kingdom of God is not just a passing thought nor a goal reached by slipshod efforts. Christian discipleship is fellowship of high and demanding standards. Morning worship, 11:00.

The Advent season is made up of the four Sundays preceding Christmas. The season is set aside in the church year so that a proper preparation shall be carried for the festival of the Nativity of our Lord. The word, Advent, coming from the Latin means coming. Thus the coming of Christ in great humility to the world, His coming in great glory to judge the world and His coming into the hearts of all mankind are some thoughts that are emphasized in the Advent season. "The church does not measure her seasons so much by the motion of the sun as by the course of her Savior; thus beginning and pursuing her year with Him, who being the "Sun of Righteousness" is the source of enlightenment in spiritual darkness."

The C. Y. Federation of Lutherans will meet at St. Paul's church in Alliance for the India parish. Sunday school executive meeting, Monday evening, 7:30. Church council, Tuesday evening, 8:00. Dorcas society is postponed one week. Catechism class, Thursday, 4 p. m. Public Thank Offering service sponsored by the Missionary society will be held Sunday evening, Dec. 8th, at 7:30 at the church.

Preaching services at the Washingtonville Lutheran church, Sunday evening at 7:30.

Pastor To Talk On "Gift of Self to God"

Rev. J. Bauman will speak at the special loyalty Sunday service at the American Emmanuel Lutheran church tomorrow on the subject "The Gift of Self to God." The Sunday school with classes for all ages meets at 9 a. m. Lee Schaefer, superintendent. Special Loyalty Sunday service at 10 a. m. German service at 11 a. m.

Advent.
The next four Sundays are days of preparation for the festival of Christmas. This season of preparation called advent, signifies "He is Coming." How many great occasions mean to us is determined by our readiness for the occasion. We welcome guests when we are ready and fit for their reception.

In its deepest significance Christmas is much more than a glad occasion. We are reminded that one is coming to us again who once came as the Savior of the World. We are to receive Him. And He will bring to those who receive Him all that is implied by His name. Jesus—He shall free them from their sins.

The preparation of the heart is therefore of the most essential importance. John the Baptist on the Jordan preached "Repent, for the Kingdom of God is at hand." In like manner the keynote of advent is a challenge to personal repentance. Selfishness and pride and all the old crooked ways of human nature are barriers to the entrance of the heart through which the real Christmas spirit can hardly pass. We often block the way to the real joys of Christmas by persistently continuing to emphasize the importance of the material things in life and at all cost striving only for them.

He who comes is less interested in other things, but desires most fully to own your heart and to possess it.

Announcements
On Monday evening the Sunday school teachers will meet at 7:30. On Wednesday and Thursday at 4 p. m., confirmation instruction. On Wednesday at 7:30 p. m., church council meeting in the church.

"I BELONG TO YOU" by ROSAMOND DU JARDIN

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Pat said, "I know my brother so well, March. I'm seven years older than he. I've felt, since our mother died, responsible for him in a way. Perhaps that seems odd to you, but he's a grown man and capable of looking after himself. But in some ways—he isn't. He's so vulnerable. He wants things so dreadfully, goes after them so hard. And when he loses, as he so often seems to lose, it does something horrible to him. Something corrosive. It eats away a little more of his self-confidence."

"He always seems very sure of himself." March's voice was level, almost without inflection.

"He seems so." Pat agreed, "but he isn't. I know. He's always had too much of the wrong things, money, complete freedom from responsibility, leisure. No one's ever expected anything from him in the way of steadiness, or sustained effort. I was reared in the same way, but it's different with a woman. Life teaches us to face things. It's always been too easy for Griff to write a check, or run away—until now, March. He has run away, but it isn't deeping. And so he's coming back."

March repeated blankly, "Run away?" Coming back? I don't understand."

The lovely disciplined mouth of the Countess Cassano trembled. She said, "I haven't seen my brother since you have. He didn't come back to the lake at all. He's been in England and France and Italy and China. I've had letters occasionally. Such unhappy letters. He's learned what everyone has to learn some time or other, that you can't run away from love, because it goes wherever you go—a sort of emotional stowaway—"

March echoed faintly, "Love? But—"

"Surely you knew he loved you." Pat's eyes were kind. "I can't imagine Griff experiencing anything like this thing that's tearing him to pieces, and not telling you about it."

"He told me," March admitted. "But I didn't dream—I had, no idea—"

"How real it was, how lasting?" Pat finished for her. "You see, he only loved once before. That nearly wrecked him. She was—" Pat shrugged, delicately, expressively, "the sort of girl who had her family waiting outside the courthouse" after the ceremony to drag her off and demand an annulment. With money. A great deal of money. And Griff was very young."

March hadn't known about that. Griff had never told her the details of that early marriage. Pity stirred in her. She brought her attention back with an effort to what Pat was saying.

"I don't know what happened between you and your husband, except that you left him. People talk, you know, and Kenoqua's like any other small town. I only hope that Griff wasn't too greatly to blame, or that if he was, you can find it in your heart to forgive him. He's suffered, March, more than you can possibly know. He'll come to you as soon as he gets home, as soon as he learns you're living apart from your husband. Is there—is there any hope?"

Her voice faltered, died, but her steady eyes held a burning question.

March said slowly, "But—I'm not divorced, Pat. Perhaps I never shall be, unless Brent wants it that way. You see, I still love him. I'm—sorry about Griff. Please believe that. But there isn't anything I can do—"

"But you'll be kind to him, March." Pat's voice and eyes beseeched her. "You'll try to understand." She went on after a moment in a different tone. "There's a kind of recklessness about Griff that's always frightened me. I can't be sure what he'd do if he's driven too far or hurt too deeply. There are so few things, so few people, he really cares about. You're one of them, March. And I'm one. It gives us—a certain responsibility."

Impulsively March laid her hand over Pat's. She said, her voice husky, "I will be kind, Pat. And I understand—better than you know—"

All that afternoon at the studio bits of that conversation kept recurring to March. And her thoughts were troubled while her fingers moved automatically, while she sketched and spaced and measured. Life was a tangle, patternless, almost purposeless. Griff loving her and her love all for Brent. And Brent? He was the unknown quantity in this equation. She had thought he loved her, she had been so confidently sure. But there had been no word from him, no sign, during the months of their separation. Was that love, checked by jealousy and suspicion, frozen stiff and hard on a coating of pride? Was he missing her as she missed him, wanting her with every breath, waiting, as she was waiting, for some word, some indication of regret?

March thought, with a kind of wonder. If he is waiting and hoping, I wouldn't know. Any more than he knows how I feel.

Pride was so pitifully unimportant, compared to their love. They had parted in bitter anger. Each of them had said, perhaps, more than he intended, more than he meant. If she wrote to Brent—

But it was never to be written, that letter whose lines had haunted her mind during the long after-noon. The words that sang in her thoughts were never to be put on paper although they lived on in her heart, to beat sometimes against her eardrums with a sound like weeping.

There was a letter for her in the mailbox when she reached home that night, addressed in an unfamiliar hand. No sense of foreboding troubled March, climbing the carpeted stairs, letting herself into her apartment. She switched on the light, tore open the square white envelope. It was a brief letter, March glanced first at the signature. Her eyes widened at sight of Sara Gregory's name. But not until she had actually begun to read the words written so unequivocally in Sara's round, clear hand, did apprehension close upon her heart, crushing it, so that her breath came slowly and with difficulty, as though she had been running.

Brent wanted a divorce. He and Sara loved each other. They meant to marry. But Brent hesitated to write to March, feeling that any action should be left to her. So Sara had undertaken to attend to it for him. She couldn't, she said, go on like this indefinitely, without any hope of happiness. She hoped March would understand.

There was nothing vindictive about the letter. There was such frankness and honesty that the thought of Sara's having written it without Brent's knowledge did not enter March's head. There was even a sort of grudging admiration in her heart for the other girl's courage. She had always known that Sara loved Brent and he had admitted once, in response to a casual question of March's, that there had been a boy-and-girl affair between them. Well, they hadn't wasted any time. It had taken only her absence to bring that youthful romance to full, if belated, flower.

A sob caught in March's throat and the letter, crumpled by the sudden tense grip of her fingers, drifted to the floor. This was the end. She couldn't fight Sara, she couldn't cling to Brent, knowing he wanted his freedom. Her hands were tied, her every impulse in that direction atrophied by the memory of Evelyn, her mother, struggling to hold the man she loved against his wish, growing warped and blind and bitter in her determination not to give him up—

Evelyn's daughter stood alone, dry-eyed beyond the relief of tears, and faced the futility of trying to tear the living tendrils of her love from the soil that had nurtured them. It was no use. Whatever happened, whatever was to come, she must always love Brent. There was nothing she could do about it. It was bigger than she. And, so long as she did not permit her love to restrain her from the course of action Sara's letter imposed upon her, there was no shame, but a kind of bitter glory in her awareness of it.

She thought that she would write to Brent, assuring him that she would do as he wished. She thought that she would write at once. But there are limits to what the spirit can force the flesh to do. After several false starts, she gave up wearily. And sat there at her desk, her lovely head bent, her eyes fixed on the paper before her. "Dear Brent—"

How very dear, how irrevocably lost to her, only her heart knew. And she could do nothing about it, nothing. Except give Brent the freedom he wanted, that he had lacked the courage to ask for. Well, she lacked courage, too. She could not write him. Not yet, perhaps not even later. It might be better, after all, to have a lawyer attend to everything. Let it all be very legal, very impersonal, cold—

Night life in London these days goes on despite incessant aerial bombing by the Nazis. Of course, there are some new angles to it. For example, all wear tin derbies and generally the customer won't check it. Then, it is customary for patrons to reserve a bed in the bomb-proof basement, which is protected against all but direct hits. Basements are stocked with provisions, fitted with gas and water-proof doors. Waiters, who also sleep on the premises, are trained in fire fighting.

Dates Are Set For City's Annual Bowling Tournament

KEGLING EVENT PLANS DRAFTED BY PIN LEADERS

Entry List Open Now For Jan. 27-Feb. 15 Competition

The city's annual bowling tournament, sponsored by the Salem Bowling Association, will be held Jan. 27 to Feb. 15 on the Masonic alleys. Dates for the big kegling event of the season were set by association officers and league representatives at a meeting last night at the Masonic temple.

The entry list is open now. Secretary Bill Juergens announced today. The deadline is Jan. 27, five days before the first bowlers take the foul line.

The 1941 tourney will be held about a month earlier than last spring's competition.

Varied rules and regulations to govern tourney play were determined at last night's meeting. The entry fee was set at 50 cents per man, per event, the money to go for prizes. Scratch will be 185 instead of 190, last spring's figure.

Handicaps will be based on the number of games bowled. Any bowler who has rolled 25 or more games will take 70 per cent of the difference between his average and scratch.

Bowlers of 15 to 25 games will take 50 per cent and bowlers with less than 15 games will bowl without handicap. All bowlers, to be eligible for the tournament, must have competed in leagues sanctioned by the Salem Bowling association.

Attending last night's meeting were Jim Primm, president of the association; Merle Caldwell, vice president; Bill Juergens, secretary; Lester Berger, representing the American league; Mike Pozniko, the Federal; Glenn Oesch, Past-time; Bill Hull and Harold Houts, Quaker City; Llewellyn, Hoffmaster's, Columbian.

Will Hunt Ducks

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Bobby Feller, ace pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, expects to be in Sandusky, O., next week for some duck hunting. Feller came to New York to see his fellow Iowan, Lee Savold, fight Billy Conn at Madison Square Garden.

Hear Penn Coach

EAST LIVERPOOL, Nov. 30.—George Munger, University of Pennsylvania football coach, will speak at a banquet here next Wednesday, honoring Joe Morbitto's East Liverpool High school grid-ders.

Fight Results

PHILADELPHIA—Eddie Miller, 169½, Philadelphia, outpointed Roxie Fargione, 167, Philadelphia (8).

BOWLING RESULTS

The Ford V-8 women's team really took over the Grate Ladies league last night as four records were shattered by this crew.

Miss Olive Ramsey was the individual star as she set new league records in individual and three game totals. Her single mark was a 244, and her three-game total amounted to 606.

Miss Ramsey led off with a 190, hit a 172 in the second frame, and finished with a blazing 244 for her 606 total.

The only Salem woman who has ever rolled a higher three-game total was Miss Stella Smith who chalked up a 636 last year, but this score was not made in league play.

The Ford V-8 team also set records for high single game and three game total. Their single high was a 935 and their three game total was a 2909.

The Salem Cab lost three straight to Brownies while Finney's were trounced in the same manner by Pokey's. The Trades Class and the Church Budget won two games respectively from the A. A. A. and Kaufman's.

In the Federal league at the Masonic alleys, the hot race for first position continues between Brownies Service and the Sanitary Foremen with Meissner's Service trailing the leaders by one game. Brownies took two out of three from the National Brass while the Foremen gained the same verdict over the O. E. Dodgers. Merry of the Foremen was the top man last night as he rolled a 241, 199, 187 for a 617 total.

Meissner's took two from the Sanitary Shippers, and the K. of C. team edged the Eagles two out of three.

MAZUR CARRIES ARMY HOPES IN TILT WITH NAVY

Service Teams To Battle Before Sell-Out Crowd

(By Associated Press)
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—To look at him you'd say he was a boy being asked to do man's work. Yet supporters of the underdog Army football team felt confident that 20-year-old Hank Mazur would give a good account of himself as today he faced the Navy on an upset victory over Navy on his slim shoulders.

Mazur has been one of the few bright spots in an otherwise somber Cadet football picture. Injuries kept him out of action until the Harvard game, but he ran 40 yards for the touchdown that brought a tie with the Crimson (the only major game Army didn't lose), he was the outstanding back on the field in the 7-0 loss to Notre Dame, and the lad who threw a four-alarm scare into Princeton a week ago before the Tigers won by 26-19.

Given a dry day—the weather man at last report was saying "cloudy and colder"—Army can be expected to rely heavily on passing. Against a bigger navy line (two bigger Navy lines, in fact, since the Middies operate on the two-unit system) the Cadets can't figure on making much headway running. So most of the army maneuvers are likely to develop into passes by Quarterback Johnny Hatch of Fort Sill, Okla., to Mazur and, just for variety, from Mazur to the Army ends.

While Navy Coach Swede Larson openly fears Mazur as the most dangerous man on either side, that does not mean he is without ball-carrying and passing operatives of his own. Chief of these, and one of the main reasons the Middies were favored as high as 1-3, is Bill Rusik of Pasadena, Calif., another sophomore.

Though emergency duty forced numerous men in both branches of the service to turn back their tickets, there was little cause for belief there would be any vacant spaces in the huge municipal stadium, which would mean another 102,000 full house.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

By EDDIE BRIETZ
NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Only thing that kept today from being a freezer around this town was the news that the Dodger deal for McKey Owen is hotter than ever.

you'll all think were plumb daffy, but California vs Stanford today is the spot to end all upsets if there ever was one. Joe Boand, the Notre Dame line coach, is one of the big shots being mentioned in those reported mid-western shifts. The M'neapolls papers are giving Tommy Harmon down the country for popping off here that the Michigan team (which lost to Minnesota 7-6) was three touchdowns better than the Gophers.

Figures Don't Lie
Says the Times-Tribune: "In three games against Minnesota, Harmon had a net gain of 109 yards while carrying the ball 45 times. That's an average of 2 and 2 tenths yards a wonder if Tommy made any mention of those figures while taking bows in the big city."

From Near And Far
George Jessel, the comedian and his eye-filling w.f.e. were at the Fordham football rally last night. At last! The Messrs. Harmon and Grange are going to meet, but only in a battle of wits on Red's Chicago radio program tonight.

Today's Guest Star
Wilbur Kenley, Jackson (Miss) Daily News: "Let's hope football doesn't go in for double features. It might be that some of the rest of those so-called undefeated and untied records might be padded with off-key officiating. The Cornells were doing all right until the dern movies came along."

Reg Mardon
We have a letter signed by 16 members of the Clemson Tigers calling us a sucker for falling for that stuff that there was dissension in the ranks. . . O. K. fellows, sorry.

RESERVE O. K.'S SUN BOWL TRIP

Will Accept Invitation For Holiday Football Game

CLEVELAND, Nov. 30.—A trip south to play in the Sun bowl game appeared certain today for Western Reserve university's football team.

As Sun bowl officials planned to meet tomorrow, the Red Cats were given the "inside track" as the team to meet Arizona State Teachers' college of Temple in the intersectional competition at El Paso, Tex., New Year day.

Coach Millard (Dixie) Howell of the border conference was represented as favoring San Jose State college of California for the Arizona team's opponent, but the Sun bowl committee was expected to seek a more distant rival.

Western Reserve's athletic board yesterday sanctioned the 2,000-mile holiday trip. Athletic Director Karl Davis announced. If selected, the Red Cats probably would leave Cleveland Dec. 28, arrive in El Paso in time for one day's practice and return by Jan. 6 without missing classes.

Godoy After Third Bout With Champ

CLEVELAND, Nov. 30.—You'd think that two fights with Joe Louis would be enough.

But not for Arturo Godoy, the rugged South American who was decided in 15 rounds and later kayoed in eight by the Brown Bomber.

Godoy breezed through a streamlined workout today in preparation for his fight here Monday with Tony Musto of Chicago, and then opened his future book.

"Sure I want to fight Louis again and I'll beat him, too," Arturo said with gestures. "An eye cut stopped me in that last bout with him. He's clipping and I'm coming back fast."

mates of the revenue to be produced then are "encouraging."

Besides Harrison and Doughton, the three and a half hour conference was attended by Senator George (D-Ga.) of the finance committee and Rep. Cooper (D-Tenn.) of the ways and means committee; Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau; Assistant Secretary John L. Sullivan; and Harold D. Smith, budget director.

Harrison said that Smith's presentation of prospective spending was "very much a part" of the discussion, which, he said, also covered the probability of having to increase the present $49,000,000,000 limit on the federal debt.

But, Harrison added, the discussions were "general" and no decisions were reached other than that regarding 1940 income.
